Subject: List of Specialist Cataloguing Manuals for RDA

Background

In 5JSC/RDA/Part 1/ALA response (0.1.1, 3rd paragraph, page 15), ALA offered to provide a complete list of specialist cataloging manuals for inclusion within RDA. At the April 2006 JSC meeting, the JSC accepted ALA's offer to provide such a list.

The following list represents contributions from many subject experts on CC:DA. While we have attempted to be as complete as possible in our suggestions, ALA acknowledges that we are working from a U.S. perspective, and may have inadvertently omitted guides that are used by other constituencies. We would be happy to have such other sources added so that the list included within RDA is indeed complete.

In compiling the list, we have deliberately excluded guides to MARC coding and tagging unless they also refer specifically to AACR2 rules (as does the CONSER Cataloging Manual). Likewise, we have not included guidelines for subject analysis and classification. We understand that the guidance that is being considered for RDA in these areas will be very general in nature, and so have considered that referring to specialist guides in these areas is beyond the scope of RDA.

Several issues have come up during ALA's compilation of this list of specialist manuals that would benefit from JSC discussion. We offer these issues, and in some cases ALA's recommendations, below.

Discussion topics

1. ALA recommends that the list of specialist manuals in RDA include guides that only address certain aspects of descriptive cataloging and access control (e.g. NACO manuals, Romanization guides), and we have included such guides in our list. Should such guides be included in a general list of specialist manuals under 0.1.1, or be referred to more specifically later in RDA in the appropriate location (e.g. Part B for the NACO manuals, 0.1.8 or 1.5 for Romanization guides) – or in both locations?
2. Since some of the manuals on our list, such as the NACO manuals, refer to topics that will be included in RDA part B, should the list of specialist manuals be moved from 0.1.8 to the General Introduction? Will there be a need for two separate lists of parallel standards, one for part A, and one for part B (to include GARR)? Or could these lists be combined within the General Introduction?

3. ALA feels strongly that RDA should refer to all of the various ISBDs that are still current. However, we were uncomfortable with considering them to be “specialist manuals” (as opposed to general cataloging standards) even though many are devoted to cataloging specific types of resources. We have not included them in the list below. Should they be included in the list of specialist manuals, or listed elsewhere in RDA with other parallel standards for resource description? ALA also notes that this situation will change as the consolidated ISBD is developed.
4. For those specialist guides that refer specifically to AACR2 rules, should they be listed within RDA regardless of whether or not there are plans to update the guide for use with RDA? If the guides are not updated, their usefulness with RDA may be limited.
5. ALA found at least one manual that could logically be listed under two categories, and so have included it twice in the attached list. Should manuals such as this be listed more than once, or somehow referenced under multiple categories?
